Interim Vice President and Provost
Colcock Hall

Medical University of South Carolina

Dear Mark:

I strongly endorse the creation of a Center for Biomedical Imaging in the College of Medicine that will allow for integration of the existing imaging research resources on our university campus. The Center will provide a campus-wide resource where both basic and clinical scientists will collaborate to develop new imaging methods, and will serve the animal imaging needs of the scientific community.

The Center will include all currently available animal imaging resources including bioluminescence imaging, micro CT, micro PET/CT and a Bruker 7 Tesla animal MRI system. These resources will be consolidated in the Bioengineering Building to be completed in the fall of 2011. The existing human 3T MR system at 30 Bee Street, under the Center for Advanced Imaging Research (CAIR), will become part of the proposed Center for Biomedical Imaging over the next two years.

The Center for Biomedical Imaging will provide MUSC faculty with a core facility for imaging research in both animals and humans. Numerous collaborations will be extended to multiple investigators in neurosciences, psychiatry, cancer and other disciplines. Opportunities to enhance state-wide research exist through affiliations with Clemson and USC by capitalizing on their strengths in engineering.

It is my pleasure to give this proposal my strong support.

Sincerely,

Etta D. Pisano, MD
Vice President for Medical Affairs
Dean, College of Medicine
MUSC CENTER FOR BIOMEDICAL IMAGING
- SYNOPSIS -
March 1, 2010
Dr. Joseph Helpem, Dr. Truman Brown, Dr. Philip Costello

Overview

Over the past three decades, the clinical and research applications of biomedical imaging have seen unprecedented growth. To take advantage of this growth, academic institutions need to disseminate these findings to the larger community by training and mentoring young investigators interested in both further biomedical imaging development as well as its particular applications to clinical and research problems. For these reasons, and in order to help integrate the existing yet diverse imaging initiatives that now exist at MUSC, we propose establishing a Center for Biomedical Imaging. This will advance imaging research here enabling MUSC to remain competitive with other academic institutions and establish the infrastructure and environment to enable MUSC to reach the next level in this crucial research area.

The Center for Biomedical Imaging will serve as a resource where basic and clinical scientists collaborate to discover new ways to study diseases and disease processes and to develop and apply this knowledge to clinically relevant research. Central to the mission objectives of the Center for Biomedical Imaging will be 1) service to the MUSC imaging research community, 2) the training and mentorship of graduate students and future leaders in biomedical imaging, 3) the recruitment of outstanding senior and young investigators, 4) the discovery of new clinical applications of imaging and their practice in the clinical arena and 5) the promotion of basic research in medical imaging and related fields. It is our vision that the MUSC Center for Biomedical Imaging will serve as a focal point for all of these activities.

Present Imaging Resources

Currently, the Center for Advanced Imaging Research (CAIR) at MUSC, located in approximately 1500 square feet at 30 Bee Street, is under the purview of Drs. Gary Aston-Jones and Peter Kalivas of the Neuroscience Department with Dr. Paul Morgan of the Radiology Department as Director. [Note: Dr. Morgan has recently announced his resignation effective June 2010. Dr. Truman Brown will assume this position in October 2010.] CAIR houses one 3 Tesla Siemens TIM Trio MRI system, which is used exclusively for research.

Separate from CAIR, and located in the Cancer Center, there exists a bioluminescence imager, a micro CT scanner and a micro PET/CT scanner, all currently under the direction of Dr. Michael Rosol of the Department of Radiology. Additionally, there is a Bruker 7 Tesla animal MRI system, under the direction of Dr. Mark Kindy, situated in yet another campus location. Finally, there are plans to consolidate these animal imaging resources within the Bioengineering building when it is completed sometime in the fall of 2011.

Although imaging research collaborations do exist within MUSC, they are somewhat limited and concentrated in specific labs. In general, the MUSC research community at large (and specifically the Neuroscience and Psychiatry Departments) has yet to capitalize on the range of resources available. This limitation, which has restricted growth of imaging studies, is most likely due to the decentralization of infrastructure, support and administration as well as the lack of leadership in the field of Biomedical Imaging.

Vision

Our vision of a Center for Biomedical Imaging is to provide an environment and infrastructure that will serve as a foundation for the advancement of imaging technology and for human and animal research applications to be used by scientists and clinicians at MUSC. This foundation will be supported by a small team of scientists and support personnel with experience in the conduct of imaging research, experimental design, development and applications. [Note: The specific details of the needed support equipment will require a survey to determine what ancillary equipment is available (e.g. computers, electronics, etc.).]
The Center for Biomedical Imaging needs to be led by an imaging scientist with knowledge and experience in running large collaborative research programs and with an established track record in NIH funding. The department best positioned to provide the necessary oversight for this Center is the Department of Radiology under the purview of the Vice Chair for Research, Dr. Joseph Helpem. Other departments must participate in the organization and governance of the Center, but the Radiology community is in the best position to support multidisciplinary research, be aware of and keep abreast of the current technology, be "in touch" with other leaders in the field and have their fingers on the pulse of funding opportunities. This "hidden support" is of great importance when trying to obtain NIH grants, as the study sections are acutely aware when there is a lack of such coordination and support at an institution.

In order to ensure that the MUSC Center for Biomedical Imaging is broadly based, it needs to be supported by as many stake holders at MUSC as reasonable, in particular the Departments of Neuroscience, Psychiatry and Radiology, and Centers such as Aging, Stroke and Hollings Cancer Center. This initiative should be structured so that other Departments and Centers with interests in imaging are able to join in the future. Further collaborative efforts must be expanded with both the ongoing research programs as well as the many untapped research interests that are present at MUSC.
Furthermore, extending our collaborations to Clemson and USC is essential in order to take advantage of State-wide strengths in engineering and biology.

The initial Programs and Applications we envision for the Center are:

Proposed Initial Technical Programs:
- Hardware & Pulse Sequence Design
- Image Analysis
- Neuroimaging
- Spectroscopy
- Molecular Imaging

Proposed Initial Targeted Applications:
- Heart, Lung, Body & Musculoskeletal
- Cancer
- Clinical Trials
- Neuroscience & Psychiatry
- Biophysics
These Programs and Applications are based on our initial (and necessarily superficial) discussions with our future colleagues at MUSC, so should be considered preliminary suggestions rather than definitive proposals.

Space

It is important for the investigators associated with the Center be able to collaborate on a daily basis. In simple terms, hallway conversations are essential for these developments and collaborations. To wit, we propose that the Center be housed in two main areas: one to support animal research and another to support human research along with the administrative infrastructure of the Center.

Human research and the administrative infrastructure space could occupy the space currently occupied by the CAIR facility at 30 Bee Street provided it can be expanded to include the additional space in that building that will be vacated in the near future. Animal research space for the Center should be designated on the second floor of the new Bioengineering building. Together, this will provide adequate office and research space for investigators and support personnel.

Conclusion

Biomedical Imaging is a major growth industry in medical research and MUSC is poised to capitalize on this opportunity. In order for this to happen, MUSC needs to coordinate its efforts and establish a Center for Biomedical Imaging. Much of the investment necessary for this to happen has already been made in the way of capital equipment acquisition and space allocation; what is now needed is scientific leadership together with the support of MUSC administration. In this synopsis, we believe we have provided the initial outline of the steps must be taken to accomplish this.

SCOPE OF WORK AND BUDGET ADJUSTMENT

FOR APPROVAL

October 8, 2010

PROJECT TITLE: Replace Basic Science Building Fire Alarm System

PROJECT NUMBER: H51-N207/State Project Number To Be Determined

CURRENT APPROVED BUDGET: $300,000

TOTAL REVISED BUDGET: $670,000

SOURCE(S) OF FUNDS: Institutional Capital Project Fund and Institutional Bond

JUSTIFICATION: The current budget of $300,000 was approved by the Board of Trustees as part of the FY10 Capital Budget at the August 2009 meeting. The project involves the replacement of the fire alarm control panel, furnishing all parts and labor to install a new fully addressable network system for floors 1-7, including the penthouse, in the Basic Science Building.

The initial project cost estimate was based on replacement of the existing fire alarm system with new code compliant components. The estimate was based on input from our fire alarm service contractor. It has been determined by our design consultant that a much larger scope of work than simple replacement of existing devices is required to meet current code requirements. The associated total project cost estimate provided by that consultant plus professional services fees is $600,000. There are many areas within the Building that still have asbestos fire proofing above the ceiling. We are asking for an additional budget allowance of $70,000 to address additional costs associated with working around this material.

We are asking the Board to approve a budget of $670,000 for this project.

PROJECT TITLE: Replace Harborview Office Tower Building Fire Alarm System

PROJECT NUMBER: H51-N208

CURRENT APPROVED BUDGET: $300,000

TOTAL REVISED BUDGET: $380,000

SOURCE(S) OF FUNDS: Institutional Capital Project Fund and Institutional Bond

JUSTIFICATION: The current budget of $300,000 was approved by the Board of Trustees as part of the FY10 Capital Budget at the August 2009 meeting. The project involves the replacement of the fire alarm control panel that will trigger a full code compliant upgrade to include a voice announcement system throughout floors 1-10 in the Harborview Office Tower Building.

The initial project cost estimate was based on replacement of the existing fire alarm system with new code compliant components. The estimate was based on input from our fire alarm service contractor. It had been determined by our design consultant that a much larger scope of work than simple replacement of existing devices is required to meet current code requirements. The associated total project cost estimate provided by that consultant plus professional service fees is $380,000.

We are asking the Board to approve a budget of $380,000 for this project.
