

What is your role at MUSC? How long have you been here? I am the Program Coordinator of Training and Intercultural Education for the Department of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion. I started at MUSC in 2010 as an Administrative Assistant in the Director's Suite at Hollings Cancer Center. In 2011, I was promoted to Administrative Coordinator for the Department of Microbiology and Immunology. In 2015, I moved to MUHA as a Senior Executive Administrative Coordinator for Perioperative Services and later the Chief Medical Officer's Office. I would say that my main function has always been to facilitate communication with in the MUSC Community.

If you could give one piece of advice to people who are just learning about diversity, equity, and inclusion work, what would it be? Be open to learn new things. Every day I have amazing opportunities to learn something new about myself, MUSC, my colleagues, and the world around us. Looking through the lenses of diversity, equity, and inclusion challenge me to ask questions and examine how I can use my experience and privilege be innovative, impactful, influential, and of service in my various roles around MUSC and Charleston.
